

Residential Substance Abuse Treatment

OVERVIEW

- Residential Substance Abuse Treatment (RSAT) programs have been in existence for more than 10 years
- Created to help offenders return to society as law abiding, self-supporting, pro-social citizens thereby reducing recidivism

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

- A nine-month, highly structured RSAT program that targets high risk, high needs offenders nearing release, probationers sentenced by the courts, parole revocators and other court or GDC-referred offenders who have a need for intensive substance abuse programming
- Offenders within the program have a history of substance abuse which was the causative factor to their correctional supervision
- Offenders are involved in an intensive, highly structured residential therapeutic treatment community which is comprised of peer groups and counselors. The community is responsible for helping offenders work together under the authority and supervision of staff.
- Program incorporates process and psychoeducational groups, individual counseling, work details, and vocational education
- Participants balance work with intensive individual and group counseling sessions within the program
- Offenders are subject to random drug screening

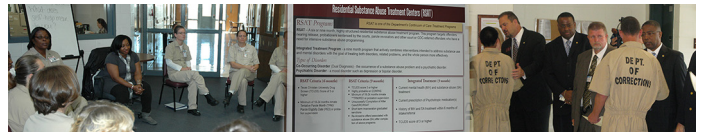

ADMISSION CRITERIA

- Requires a court-order
- Offenders may have an assessed need as identified by the Next Generation Assessment (NGA) or placement by professional override
- Minimum of 18-24 months on Tentative Parole Month (TPM), Parole Eligibility Date (PED) or probation supervision
